Sarnia Road Bridge Closed into November
October 24, 2007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The Sarnia Road Bridge in London will remain closed into November for repairs following a tractor-trailer collision earlier in October. Canadian Pacific Railway, which owns the bridge, is arranging materials and a contractor to re-instate the bridge by early November. CP Rail hopes to complete the work by mid-November.

The City of London recommends drivers continue to use Gainsborough Road or Oxford Street West as alternate routes until the bridge re-opens. Emergency signage is in place near the bridge. At Wonderland and Hyde Park Roads, locations well in advance of the closure, additional signs have been put up to alert motorists before they reach the bridge.
